The content of your pages and Web site has to be managed, too. This involves a great deal of time and energy, including the time and effort spent by site visitors. In today's Web-based world, the visitor to your Web site is not necessarily your neighbor on the next block. He could be a businessman or a hobbyist throughout the country or around the world. The visitor to your site is not necessarily your neighbor on the next block. He could be a businessman or a hobbyist throughout the country or around the world. These visitors need to be redirected from your site if they're looking for something else. If you're serious about your Web site and your site's potential audience, then you should be familiar with the most basic on-site issues and how to work on making your site more responsive to visitors. You will also want to know how to perform basic Web site maintenance. Before you get started, here are a few important guidelines to keep in mind: • Before you start on any site-maintenance project, make sure you have the proper equipment. That means the right tools and the right knowledge. • If you don't feel comfortable with Web site maintenance and administration, it's best not to begin any major projects. A good first step would be to hire a consultant to help you learn some basic skills. • For best results, always perform any site maintenance tasks while your site is under active usage. • Always get permission before performing any major site maintenance project or task. The Web is littered with data that isn't secure. •

A1 Website Analyzer is a powerful software solution developed to help you analyze and create reports based on the analysis of a website. The interface with which A1 Website Analyzer greets you isn't all that user-friendly at first. There is just so much in front of you that it makes your eyes run around. The cause for that isn't a bad GUI design, but rather an abundance of functions and features that the application offers, which actually is a good thing. A1 Website Analyzer gives you the chance to switch the interface to a 'Simplified easy mode' in which you just enter the website address, click the scan button and the application starts to gather listed pages and analyzes content. The application itself runs fast but the time it takes to run a full scan solely depends on the size of the website. No matter if you use the default or simplified versions, the application still allows you to inspect anchor text, check for broken links, analyzes internal links, optimizes bandwidth usage, stress test web servers and catalog links as canonical, nofollow, robots or noindex. A1 Website Analyzer provides a substantial amount of information after a scan is complete. You get to view core data such as response code, estimated change frequency, content type, character set and toggle various types of crawler state flags. The application allows you to view the source code for the page and shows you any errors that are found in relation to the World Wide Web Consortium. The application also offers you the chance to analyze and extract keyword use throughout the website. You can analyze active addresses and raw text input and generate a detailed table that contains the count and percentage values for any given word. In closing, A1 Website Analyzer offers you great deal of information about any website that you can use for SEO. Another handy website analyzer application for you to see what is on a web page, generating search engine friendly URLs and performing various other keyword related functions. A1 Website Analyzer allows the user to generate Keywords and Data, analyze Hyperlinks, perform Crawl and Analysis, extract URLs, create Anchor Titles, check H-bombs, check for broken links, perform a Stress Test, catalog hyperlinks, convert URLs into sitemaps, extract Meta tag content, extract images from web pages. As a website analyzer, A1 website analyzer does a good job of generating Search Engine Friendly URLs, which is vital for SEO and great in terms of connecting to humans. Once you've clicked on the button to select your desired URL, this application will show you a nice brief description of the specific website, which is both good and bad. A1 website analyzer will do this, but it's not a very good way of showing website descriptions. A1 website analyzer does display the URL and provides a descriptive textual description for your intended web page. When you click on the button to navigate to the site, you will arrive at a new URL in the address bar. Once again, it's not the best practice, but it works. Upon navigating to the website, the user is greeted with a new high score that can be used to rate this webpage. After the web page is downloaded, a detailed report is generated. You will see a list of all of the external links to this website, along with the corresponding URLs. A1 website analyzer also offers the chance to view the source code, grab the meta tag content, grab the images from the page and even view a sitemap, this is all generated right within the application. Once your keyword search is completed, you can perform a crawl of the extracted web
