AutoCAD [Win/Mac] [Latest] 2022

History There are two sides to the story about how AutoCAD was born. The first was being involved in the design of a new amusement park for the Hershey chocolate company in Hershey, Pennsylvania. Not only was the park called Hersheypark, but the guest park was built entirely on computer-generated models. This influenced how the company looked at CAD for a new product. "When we were designing the park, we would take the park design and then we would fly helicopters around to take photographs of the park and overlay it on top of the model." A customer of mine who works in the computer world was working for a digital agency in the early '80s and was involved in that project. He'd flown around the park and built a model. This was done by the same type of software in a small computer, like a PDP-10 running the one of the first CAD software programs. He called it something like CAD-PDP. "We didn't realize that we had a whole lot more choices, and we were very small about it and it was not commercial." That small program started to evolve into AutoCAD. It was a program created to allow engineers to build a model with tools that worked, so the engineers could walk away from their drawings and go work on other things. "What really got us going was this. We had a customer who was building a car and he needed the same functionality to build his car, but we didn't have a program that would do that. So, we said 'Well, it's gotta be software'." The second story is about how AutoCAD was developed, and how it was first sold. This is a little bit different. We had this customer who was building a room and he needed to do the same exact thing. I went down to his house and I sat down and built a simple little program on top of DOS, which would do what he wanted to do, but it wasn't any good. It was kind of a toy. So, I came back to the office and I was sitting in my cube and I said 'Well, the only way we're going to get this right is if we put together a team. I'll put together a team, and I'll take a vacation and I'll hire some people to do this'. That's how the team came together. It
