United States Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit. Submitted April 19, 1996. *Decided April 25, 1996. Before: BROWNING, REINHARDT, and FERNANDEZ, Circuit Judges. 1 MEMORANDUM 2 Anne and Charles Farley appeal pro se the district court's dismissal of their action against the Director of the Veterans Affairs ("VA") and the United States, seeking review of the VA's denial of their disability benefits pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act. We have jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1291. We review de novo, Ruiz v. VA, 859 F.2d 845, 846 (9th Cir.1988), and we affirm. 3 Appellants first contend that the VA's denial of their claim for disability benefits is not an "order," as required for review under the APA. We disagree. 4 In reaching its conclusion, the district court relied upon this court's decision in Rosetti v. Sullivan, 908 F.2d 1192 (9th Cir.1990). In Rosetti, we held that the denial of a claim for total disability benefits under the Social Security Act is an "order" for purposes of review under the APA. 908 F.2d at 1198. 5 Appellants argue, however, that Rosetti is distinguishable on

The overview of the game is that the game will be played online on a map. Each player takes control of a character that can move around the map and do stuff. Once a character dies, they will be replaced by another character, who is basically a clone of the player character. The player characters are pretty much only there to serve as fodder for helping the other characters to become stronger. Each character has a set of stats, which fluctuate depending on their level. There are three classes: Warriors, Mages, and Sorcerers. Warriors have higher attack strength, which makes them so useful for getting kills. Mages have higher magic resist and magic, which makes them important in defense and survivability. Sorcerers have a diverse set of skills, and are good at damage and heal. The main drawback with sorcerers are that they have more skill points, and less experience points to use those skills. Warriors and Mages have experience points, which make them good for learning skills and gaining levels. If you let characters get too low on experience points, they will become out of combat skills, which are basically useless skills. If you happen to lose a character to this, it is pretty much the end of the game. The map has a lot of features. There are different areas where you can fight, the places where you can obtain items, and the way points. If a character dies, you can summon a pet. There is also a lot of crafting you can do, which makes gathering materials really easy and efficient. Some areas have quests, where you will have to help certain NPCs find their way, or complete puzzles to progress. These quests are pretty easy to complete, and are fairly harmless in the grand scheme of the game. You can also get rid of enemies, either by destroying their items or killing them. If you are looking for more action, then this is a good game. The game has a lot of ways for you to interact with other players, and does not focus as heavily on the combat. I believe that is a major strength in the game, as the combat can become really stale, and you will not get as much enjoyment from it. The story is okay, and the setting really fits the game. Characters feel pretty much one-dimensional, and the story does not really flow well. The game also has a very short length. You will complete the game in probably about 4-6 hours. A lot of people are saying that the game is repetitive, and just recycled, but I thought it bff6bb2d33
