Casio FX-570 ES PLUS v.1.4..The present invention is directed to a knife block assembly for mounting knives. In particular, the invention is directed to a knife block assembly having one or more knife holders for holding the knives and one or more knife-retaining means. The knife-retaining means may be provided in the form of one or more knives, a knife plate, a knife holder, a knife-retaining wire or the like, whereby a knife or knives located in the knife holder can be removed and replaced by at least one or more of the knife-retaining means. Cutlery, including knives, forks, spoons, and the like, are stored and organized for easy access in a knife block. While the invention has particular utility for knife blocks for household use, it can be used with any type of knife block, including but not limited to kitchen knife block assemblies, commercial knife block assemblies, and the like. Moreover, the invention is generally applicable to any type of other drawer and/or cabinet-type knife block assemblies. Conventional knife block assemblies are generally made up of one or more knife holders for holding knives and one or more knife-retaining means. Conventional knife holders are most often made of wood and are relatively permanent. Typical knife holders for household use have been made of wood for at least several decades and typically wood having wood-grain pattern. The knife-retaining means for knife blocks are most often made of metal or a plastic material, such as disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 1,328,981 issued to Jeanson on Feb. 9, 1920. While metal knife-retaining means are durable and have desirable appearance, metal knife-retaining means are relatively heavy and are therefore not suitable for use in kitchen knife blocks that may be lifted several times during a single meal.
